Police Law

Patricia accepts instructions in all areas of police law. She is particularly experienced in representing police forces at inquests and inquires. She also acts in related civil proceedings and actions under the Human Rights Act. She has advised on the use of CHIS, RIPA 2000 as well as matters involving sensitive operational policing.

Crime and Regulatory

Patricia has prosecuted and defended in both the Magistrates' Court and the Crown Court across a broad spectrum of offences as well as in extradition proceedings.

In recent years, her criminal work has focused more on fraud and business crime. She is experienced disclosure counsel and has acted in a number of high-profile, long-running frauds instructed by the SFO, ORR and the police. She has also acted as LPP counsel for the SFO. More recently, she has undertaken work for the Insolvency Service.

Patricia is particularly well-suited to complex and/or intricate, document-heavy work. She is also accustomed to working as part of a large team. She has been instructed in cases involving professional discipline.
